

“Clean and Affordable Energy for a Growing, Secure Economy”

President Bush this year has called for an energy bill with precisely these four components:

- Conserve more energy
- Produce more energy
- Diversify our energy supply
- Employ the latest technology to deliver energy to the American people.

Congress must act now to ensure stabilized energy prices three years from now:

- While Congress has delayed passing the energy bill these past three years, crude oil prices have gone up 171 percent; gasoline prices have climbed 36 percent; and diesel prices are up 55 percent.
- Heating oil prices have gone up 126 percent; the cost of coal has risen 128 percent; while the cost of natural gas has climbed 111 percent.
- Create jobs, stabilize energy prices, protect our environment, and ensure an abundant supply of clean energy.

Passage of the Comprehensive Energy Bill = Jobs:

- Abundant and affordable energy stimulates the economy and creates jobs.
- Nearly 2 million American jobs will be saved over the next decade.
- Tangible savings for Americans on oil and gas consumption.

John R. Bolton - The Right Man for America at the U.N.

“John Bolton is personally committed to the future success of the United Nations and he will be a strong voice for reform at a time when the United Nations has begun to reform itself to help meet the challenging agenda before the international community. John will also help to build a broader base of support here in the United States for the UN and its mission. As Secretary General Annan has said, ‘U.S. support of the UN is critical to the success of this institution.’ The United States will continue to do its part.”

-- Secretary Rice when announcing John Bolton's nomination.

- Every nominee deserves an up or down vote.
- John Bolton has had a distinguished career both in and out of government spanning 25 years. President Bush nominated him due to his extensive knowledge of how the U.N. works and his commitment to making it stronger and more effective.
