

Iowa Disaster Information

Senator Grassley's state offices have been assisting tornado and flood victims with federal assistance since the first tragedy struck Iowa in May. His offices serve as a liaison between Iowans and their federal government including federal disaster relief. Contact information for each of Senator Grassley's six district offices can be found below.

Many counties in Iowa are now included in the President's Disaster Declaration meaning thousands of Iowans are eligible for federal assistance. It's important to register with FEMA and any other federal agencies if you've been affected by recent severe weather. You may never need the assistance but it's free to sign up and may save some time and anxiety in the future.

Special Note to Businesses:

Even if you did not experience physical damage, it's still important to sign up with FEMA and SBA, because you may be eligible for a business loan if you suffer effects from the storm. Businesses located in counties contiguous to federally declared disaster areas can also apply for certain types of assistance.

Contact information for several federal agencies is available below.

For federal assistance, first sign up with FEMA Federal Emergency Management Agency / Small Business Administration
